M'NAMARA'S RABBIT DOG.
He Assisted in a Unusual Fox Hunt in a Connecticut City.
The prolonged cold spell and hard blanket of snow on the ground had driven predatory beasts and birds into Connecticut cities and villages in search of food, and the hunting was better in town than out of it. The liveliest fox hunt of the season occurred in the heart of Norwich, says a Norwich correspondent of the New York Sun. It was about 11:30 o'clock in the forenoon when James Gregson, coachman for J. De-Tafford Blackstone, who was exercising the latter's spanking team on Orchard street, saw a fox crossing the street about a dozen rods ahead of him.
The fox had been trotting along at a free-and-easy gait, but took fright at the team, bounded over a stone-wall near a dwelling and plunged into a grove of trees near the Rockwell mansion. Gregson "fired up" promptly with a sportsman's ardor, and drove at a rattling pace to John McNamara's house at Cliff and Heath streets. He flung down the reins, leaped from the carriage and latched the horses in seven seconds. Breathless, he cried:
"Lend me your dog, John! Your rabbit dog, I mean—I ain't got no time to talk—tell yer later—come, quick—seen a fox—hurry up with your dog—whoo-la!"
"All right!" shouted John in return, "there's the dog—come here. Spot—take him—it's a fox, d'ye understand?"—"Ain't em, now—git!"
And James Gregson and Spot were off on the trail of Reynard. Spot is by no means a fox dog. He is just a rabbit dog—a cross between a fox-terrier and a pointer—but John McNamara yelled "fox" into his ear and he seemed to be inspired from that instant on for thirty minutes. But James Gregson had no gun, so he ran like a deer across lots to his own home, the rabbit dog racing behind him, seized his gun, and a moment later hunter and dog were tearing down Orchard street in pursuit of the game. At the entrance of the Rockwell grove, into which the fox had plunged, Gregson put Spot's nose on the trail, and that inspired animal uttered a single enthusiastic cry and followed as if he had never done any hunting in his life except chasing foxes.
When the dog had disappeared in the forest Gregson shrewdly took a short cut through it, came out on its eastern border a few minutes later, and, posting himself on the summit of a famous cliff there, confidently waited the approach of the chase. The dog was now in full cry and the chase evidently coming Gregson's way. So he slipped behind a tree, cocked both barrels and lifted himself on tiptoe with expectation. He had stood in that attitude about eight minutes when he heard the snapping of twigs in the grove not more than six yards away, and almost instantly Reynard leaped out of cover and made directly toward the ledge. He never reached that landmark, however. James Gregson's gun spoke out—once, twice—and the fox, with a wicked snarl, leaped into the air, dropped on his side, rolled over a couple of times and died within ten seconds.

Two minutes later John McNamara's extraordinary rabbit dog came leaping into the arena, and when he saw what kind of a beast it was he had been hurrying through the brush he was so astonished that he sat down on his haunches and gazed silently at the game. Gregson picked up the fox, threw it across his shoulder and started homeward, or teamward, the proudest man in Eastern Connecticut. The animal was a splendid dog-fox, weighing eighteen pounds, the next to the biggest one that has been killed in the state in a year.
Out Generalized.
In the Franco-Prussian war the generalship of the Germans lay in massing larger bodies of troops in each fight than the French had at that spot to oppose them. At Weissenberg 44,000 Germans and seventy-two guns were against 4,500 French and eighteen guns; at Woezth, 92,000 Germans and 342 guns were against 36,800 French and 131 guns; at Spicheren 38,400 Germans and 121 guns were against 24,000 French and seventy guns; at Sedan 155,000 Germans and 703 guns were against 93,000 French and 408 guns.
Insta 1 of Working.
"Yes, sir," said the young man, "I want to work for the government."
"O!" said the congressman, his face brightening. "I didn't get things right at first, I thought you wanted an office."
A Misunderstanding.
"Confound it!" exclaimed Jackson. "What a stupid fellow that jeweler is!"
"How so?" inquired his friend.
"Why, I told him the other day that I wanted engraved in the engagement ring the letters 'From A to Z'—from Arthur to Zenobia, you know—and the idiot went to work and put in the whole alphabet—Harper's Bazar."
A Libelous Epithet.
"You said the Blingtown Budget, didn't you, for libel in calling you a blasted old fool?"
"Yes, and I got damages, too."
"So the jury was on your side?"
"Yes, they held that the word 'old' was libelous in the last degree when applied to a man of my age and appearance. — Life.

THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.—GENTLEMEN:—Some time ago I sent for $1.00 worth of your Tablets for Tobacco Habit. I received them all right and, although I was both a heavy smoker and chewer, they did the work in less than three days. I am cured. Truly yours, MATTHEW JOHNSON, P. O. Box 43, PITTSBURGH, PA.
THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.—GENTLEMEN:—It gives me pleasure to speak a word of praise for your Tablets. My son was strongly addicted to the use of liquor, and through a friend, I was led to try your Tablets. He was a heavy and constant drinker, but after using your Tablets but three days he quit drinking, and will not touch liquor of any kind. I have waited four months before writing you, in order to know the cure was permanent. Yours truly, MRS. HELEN MORRISON, CINCINNATI, OHIO.
THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.—GENTLEMEN:—Your Tablets have performed a miracle in my case. I have used morphine, hypodermically, for seven years, and have been cured by the use of two packages of your Tablets, and without any effort on my part. Address all Orders to
